EVENT DESTINATION

Award-winning wedding venue plans major expansion

CARLETON PLACE, July 22, 2015. Stonefields will be breaking ground this October on two exciting new projects - a three-season event barn and a state-of-the-art commercial kitchen.

With the new buildings, Stonefields will offer an all-inclusive experience for wedding and private event clients, complete with in-house catering services offering a versatile collection of menus created by the Stonefields culinary team.

This new event barn will extend the Stonefields season from the beginning of May through to the end of October. It will be built by local craftsmen from an Ottawa Valley heritage barn that will be rebuilt on the Stonefields property using a post and beam construction.

"This expansion project is going to create jobs, both during the constructions phase, and next spring, when we launch our 2016 season with the new Stonefields culinary team and service staff," says Stephanie Brown, co-owner. "It's exciting for the local economy, exciting for our clients, and thrilling for us. We look forward to creating a personalized, unique experience for everyone who chooses to hold their wedding or event at our farm."

These projects are the latest in a string of recent enhancements to the property, which also include elegantly strung Edison lights above the cocktail courtyard area, and a new stone firepit for evening bonfires. Stonefields is thrilled about this new venture and looks forward to continuing to deliver world-class wedding packages to clients from around the globe.
